They reported yesterday that one out of 108 fish died. While that is a very low mortality rate, it's too early to make conclusions. It may take several days for sediment in gills to affect health. I'll see if I can get a new report today.

Also, the BOR has increased releases at Navajo Dam in New Mexico in order to try to protect aquatic life in the San Juan River.

I just spoke with Director of CO FW&P. They will call me with data about their fish cage and would like us to disseminate that information in our statements.
